

“What began with a meeting in China grew into a key role within DFD.”

Martijn Lubberts – Technical manager

Martijn has been involved with Dutch Farm Design from the very beginning — in fact, even before the official establishment of DFD. In 2017, he met Arjan for the first time in China, a moment that laid the foundation for a long-term collaboration. Since then, Martijn has been closely connected to the development and growth of the company.

Within DFD, Martijn holds final responsibility for engineering, procurement, and project management. He is also part of the management team. Over the past years, he has developed significantly, particularly in the areas of material selection, technical knowledge of light industry, and electrical engineering and HVAC installations.

A key part of his role is guiding, directing, and motivating colleagues — both on-site and in the office. Martijn draws a great deal of energy from DFD’s international working environment and the dynamics of collaborating with different cultures. The open, collegial atmosphere and the strong mutual connection within the team ensure that he enjoys his work every day.

According to Martijn, DFD is an organisation with great potential and opportunities for growth — something he is eager to continue contributing to. His dedication, technical expertise, and leadership make him an important force within the company.
